

George M. Grow
The Red Kiss of Awakening
Epilogue

Those who are quick to dismiss others as conspiracy theorists also exert an exclusive claim to the truth. They are no longer in a position to lead a discussion with others and to enter into compromises, but instead degrade them and end any communication. This approach is totalitarian and tyrannical. And if one comes to this conclusion because all other opinions have led to this very conclusion, it is a form of fascism in one way or another.

This comedy, conceived as a piece to be read, is a warning to everyone who undermines freedom of speech, and is a friend and comrade to anyone who is on the side of the family of humanity in support of democracy and basic rights. With the knowledge that the "Kiss of Awakening" is bloody red.

The liberation of the world is not to be won without self-sacrifice. Just speaking the truth can demand sacrifices. But when we, in the spirit of the Books of Life, stick together, we can spread that burden among ourselves so that everyone only has a small sacrifice to bear. Together we can banish the old world; together we can found a family of humankind. Together we are the greatest power on earth.

This piece is meant to be performed as well as read. It addresses the positive theory that without a new function for religion – as a new form of philosophical or empirical, even ritual form of access to the whole of the world, any form of commonality is lost, whether it be the new birth of reason, democracy or the values of freedom, human decency and truth.

The overly critical spirit of the Modern Age has severed our connection to millennia-old traditions. Instead of questioning and reforming them, they simply cast into oblivion. Tradition is like a giant on whose shoulders the Modern Age is carried. The Modern Age can see farther when the giant carries and supports it. If the giant drops the dwarf, he is even blinder than the giant.

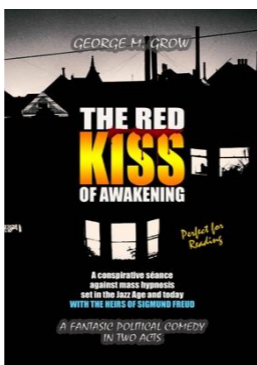

As with all the Books of Life, comedy follows a formula. It leads us into a new age.

Tradition + Modernity = Integrality.

Prehistoric times, Antiquity, the Middle Ages, Modern Times, the Integral Time.

In conclusion, after reading, there remains a feeling and the thought that this comedy gives us a perspective of a new and desirable future. Enjoy the other Books of Life as well and recommend them further to friends and family! Doing so helps bring the family of humankind closer to a better and more sensible life. There is nothing greater and nothing better!
